My Own Bright Rose.

There are gardens and gardens of roses,
But not one like I cover
With the rose of my heart,
The rose that grows
And where I live,
No rose is so dear as she.

My rose has eyes that see, because She has every eye of grace.

And when I look at her,
She is the most beautiful rose.

From the garden of home
She comes to me to stay.

For the love of life

Love causes me to stay.

As the rose, so fair and sweet,

As the rose, so fair and sweet.

She makes me complete.

The bright rose to my garden, the rose

Brings me joy, the rose of my heart.

Miscellaneous.

Beauty without grace is a look without charm. The more an idea is developed, the more it becomes interesting. The deeper it goes, the more it is pursued, the better it is.

You can take an old hen and a dyed pot and make a bird twice as beautiful as an Australiarian parrot.

Inimitable good nature is the most precious gift of Heaven, spreading itself like oil over the troubled sea of thought, and keeping the soul smooth and equal in the roughest wather.

The twelfth child, a son of a citizen of New Brunswick, N. J., was born at twelve o'clock on the twelfth day of the twelfth month of last year, and weighed twelve pounds to an ounce, the mother can tell.

St. John's N. Y., had a novel funeral the other day. A dead person was a woman, and six women acted as pall-bearers. They were dressed in black, with white veils and gloves, and carried the corpse from the house to the hearse, and lowered the coffin to the grave by hand.

With the arrival of six yards of cable divers have been able to communicate with persons above water, to receive instructions, to ask for tools, to report investigations, and the course of submarine investigations all by telephone.

The startling discovery was made by

M. S. H. that a portion of a person's fading is venomous, as it contains a secretion which is equally insatiable. Breaking the fast deprives the saliva of its poison-like quality, as the parasita are then taken into the stomach with the food. The eminent biologist gives for the present, no fact, and makes no attempt at explanation.

Gilligan Graves of South Killingly, Connecticut, when a school boy, fell upon the ice and broke his right arm; next he was thrown from an ex car and broke his collar bone. When a young man, his ex glashed and split his right leg, so that he could not walk, and was lame and painful. A few days ago, in a friendly scuffle with a neighbor, he fell and broke his leg in two places.

No man, says an English writer, ever enjoyed life more keenly than Anthony Trollope.

He was a country squire, yet fondly enjoyed traveling, and wholly incapable of argument. Once he and a party of friends were in consternation in a boat, when a shark came up to them.

They were about to jump overboard, when Mr. Trollope came forward, and said, "I differ from you entirely."

"I differ from you entirely," said the shark.

"I differ from you entirely," said Trollope.

Towny was a little rogue, whom his mother had hard work to manage. Their house to the outside was a few feet above ground, and Towny, to escape a well-deserved whipping, climbed up the outside of the room, and lay down under the eaves. The shark once raised his head, and roared, "I differ from you entirely."

It is said of the new Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "Tealanie," that the completed portion of the piece contains a pretty burlesque in Fancy, a military march for two or three hours, a scene in which the Queen of Sheba describes of the wife of a London knight, and another duo, "With a Curly Wig," in which an old man tries to dazzle a girl with his title.

London fog is a vastly greater evil than the smog of Paris, and the expense of water to flush down incalculable.

Official statistics show that during the week ending December 16th no fewer than 637 persons died in London from diseases of the respiratory organs, "under the influence of the foul atmosphere," according to Dr. W. G. B. 26th The Post of Paris said, "It is quite possible, judging from past experience, that today's fog may cost us as many lives as Tel-el-Kehf, and that the fog of December 26th may be fatal to as many subjects of the Queen as the battle of the Pyramids."

The Prince of Wales had one of his Christmases—a ten-inch shell, mounted on a handsome wooden stand, and bearing this inscription: "Presented to H. R. H. the Prince of Wales by Admiral Lord Alcester, 1st Dec. 1862." It was the birthday of the Prince of Wales, son of the Queen of England, July 12, 1852. It came through the port side of Her Majesty's ship Alexandria, above anchor, passing through torpedo-tent's cabin, striking comical of engine-room and rolled along main deck, when Mr. Hardinge, gunner, put it into the tank of water, for which he received the Victoria Cross.

It is considered by many in England a great pity that the old order of sergeants at law, to which Sergeant Ballantyne belongs, is done away with, and that only a few now remain of a body that used to be numerous.
